Fundació Institut d'Estudis Nord-americans

Barcelona

ien.es

The Institut d'Estudis Nord-americans, founded in 1951, has a consistent track record in promoting mutual knowledge between Catalonia and the United States.

The desire to build bridges through education led the Consulate General of the United States in Barcelona to request that our organization become a Host Institution of the EducationUSA advising services of the U.S. Department of State.

From January 2023, the EducationUSA Advising Center in Barcelona is located at the IEN, to provide official information regarding higher education institutions in the United States.

4 — Community Colleges

Community colleges are small, local institutions of higher education. Although these are local institutions, whose objective is to serve their “community”, many of them have a high percentage of international students. Community colleges offer two-year associate’s degrees and transfer to a university for a final two years to complete a bachelor’s degree. They also offer short-term programs, such as intensive English courses, academic stays (e.g. a gap year), and Certificate Programs for professional/continuing education.
